

A Weaver's Dream!

Success is the result of many things done in a consistent way. Failure is a natural state.

The moment we are living the life which is far less than what we are capable of, we find our days are filled with dissatisfaction and frustration. And unless one is successful in his or her own terms, one may still feel the achievements are not giving the complete satisfaction. Of course, it is independent of what amount of money one earns.

When I studied great leader's life, I found a common factor. They started with where they are and with what they have. They stick to their principles. When things did not work, they reflected on their mistakes, pondered for right reasons, experimented and again started with the ground level. And several such iterations. While it worked, people gathered, universal help flowed in because of his dedication to the cause which he or she was touched with.

Feeling good about oneself, body, mind (thinking) and the environment where we are in, all matters. While we can manage the environment it gives the average results. Surrounding with people who can be a constant source of encouragement towards ones endeavors helps immensely.

One need to be in the circle of influence, where he or she can work with. It is simply not possible to connect with different type people and expect things to move in the direction desired. That's where the concept of workers arrived, it's a give and take approach. Less effective and produces average results.

Our talent, vision and connections are the strength that everyone can start with. When intentions are pure and long enough, impurities around vanishes and will be filled by right set of people suitable for such frequency. Till then one has to trust in himself, continue correcting based on the facts, again and again.

Nature intends everyone to be unique. It has invested enormous amount of energy, calculation and positioned individuals for specific reasons. The primary objective starts with fulfilling his or her longings, liberate from the clutches of desires and then elevate the conscience.

If anyone subjected to a particular experience, that is to make one more fit, learn to interact with the fellow beings, safe guard from the peril of the timid. Once these basics are met, expectation is that we lead ourselves towards the uniqueness which is invested in us.

I discussed with people on how to find what is required to make our life more meaning full. A quick summary is below.

When our mind calms for longer duration, one can listen to soul, by following that one would be able to produce the miracles in the life that he or she would be astonished. Soul knows everything it is only waiting to turn your gaze inwards, mind inside and expect more from yourself than from those around you. However high we value ourselves, it is only our actions which proves who we are. When we start observing ourselves lot of things get revealed. You wonder how this particular trait has originated in your behavior and you can trace back to its origin and correct yourself.

Most of the successful people whom I interacted for my direction also said, if there were handful of people to encourage me while I was starting with my ideas, today I would have achieved many more times than what I have achieved now.

For generating energy required for superior performance, find those set of people who are genuinely interested in your works. We find comfort in those who agree with us, growth occurs with those who don't agree. Frame a vision with your picture and write below that, this person is going to achieve all you want to experience. Put a timeline.

I learnt if I am doing any work apart from soul's satisfaction, it can fill me with negativities. Greediness, competition, expectation and disappointments. Want of accumulation beyond reasons, honor, power can also blind and deviate one from the path.

Recently was in a conversation with a known person who was talking and justifying about a 200 Cr scam. And concluded that would leave a huge amass for that persons dependents.

This made me think what Kevin Green wealth coach, UK taught us. Kevin has made a trust to look after his assets, directed trusties to release to his children equal to the amount they generate every year from their own efforts. The trust would match equal to their earnings once in a year.

Kevin was radiating with sense of joy, freedom and carefree by nature. Whereas the person talked about INR 200 Cr scam looked dark on face (not color), false sense of pride, unable to tolerate the goodness in others and irritable when things like charity, doing general good and empowering mass are discussed.

Real test of knowledge lies in the utility of it.
